

Unique

Ava Jones 7th grade

From day to night, lightness and darkness, everything is made of opposites and differences making everything unique. Being unique makes the world even more diverse, making communities explore differences, opportunities, and becoming social to others no matter how they may look. One way that I see uniqueness is through the lines in the movie Wonder when August's mom says the quote, "you can't blend in when you were born to stand out." Aggie's mom is explaining that even if your appearance may seem different, you're unique, bold and special in your own way. She's also telling Auggie that he may look different, but he was born to stand out.

Uniqueness is a position where someone or something is unlike anything else in comparison. When used in relation to humans, it is often in relation to a person's personality, or some specific characteristics of it, signaling that it is unlike the personality traits that are prevalent in that individual's culture. Everyone is born with uniqueness, it's not something that you gain or control as you get older, it's part of you. Being unique defines who you are and expresses you a positive way. Without a sense of uniqueness, you will never feel satisfied and always very perturbed.

Just remember that you have always been born to stand out and be different, that's why we all don't share the same looks, hobbies and culture. We were all created differently and uniquely making us who we are. If we never experienced any kind of uniqueness, the world would be bland, boring and not exciting so be proud that you were born with a purpose of uniqueness and never doubt yourself about looks, interest and capability. We will stand together, believe together and show importance to each other even if it may be hard... we are our own!
